

I am in favor of the FCC strictly limiting the number of media outlets that a single entity can own, especially in the medium of radio. In the interest of true diversity for the consumer, and true liberty for the citizen, the rapidly consolidating ownership of radio stations must be halted and reversed.

The FCC must not equate the right to make money with a free media. A truly free media would offer every kind of music, news, radio performance, sports coverage, and talk radio, no matter what the profit potential. That is the ideal, and it is the FCC's job to see that we move closer to it. The job of the FCC is not simply to help a small number of companies make money.

Thank you for your attention.

Dan S. Wang